

Webbit

The idea behind Webbit is to be a nearly full-feature Reddit clone.

We do not yet have a company branding, so we will need both the web design and the website development. The features we need for our new website are as follows:

- Our users should be able to see a nice and welcoming landing page.
- A User should be required to sign in or sign up the before being able to use the website's functionalities.
- A User should be able to subscribe and unsubscribe from a community.
- The community page should display the number of submissions in that given community and the number of users that are subscribed to it.
- A User should be able to create a new community.
- A User should be able to edit their account information and delete their account if they wish.
- A User should have a profile page that displays the submissions they have made and the comments they have created.
- A User should be able to see other users' profile pages.
- A User should be able to search for information on the website.
- A User should have a feed page that will display only the submissions of the communities to which they are subscribed.
- A User should see ads if they do not have a premium membership.
- A User should be able to create a new submission (post) to a given community.
- When creating a new submission, a User should be able to
 - add an image and video to the submission.
 - include a link to the submission.
 - include text to the submission.

Webbit

- A User must select a community in order to post a submission to it.
- A User should only be able to edit and delete submissions, comments, and communities they authored.
- Users should be able to leave a comment on a submission.
- Users should be able to edit and update their comments
- Users should be able to delete their own comments.
- Users should be able to upvote and downvote a comment.
- Users should be able to upvote and downvote a submission.
- A User should be able to receive a notification on their email when another user comments on their submission.
- A User should be able to opt out of receiving a notification on their email when another user comments on their submission.
- A User should be able to remove the ads on the website by getting a premium membership.
- If a User has a premium membership.
 - they should be able to easily cancel it.
 - they should be able to see details of their premium membership on their account settings.
- If a User cancels their premium membership, they should see ads again.
- An Admin User should be able to
 - see an "Admin" option on the website.
 - delete other regular users' accounts.
 - edit, update and delete
 - regular users' submissions
 - regular users' comments
 - communities.
- The website should be hosted and we should be able to access it using a domain.

We are looking for an estimated project cost and a timeline.

Thank you,

The Webbit team
